Introduction

* indicates a required field

Before you begin

A co-production is a project which has been made under an Arrangement (ie a Treaty or Memorandum of Understanding) with a partner country, and has been approved as an official co-production by the Competent Authority (Authority) nominated in each country.

For more information, please refer to the Co-Production program guidelines.

The Producer Offset and Co-Production Unit (POCU) anticipates you will have spoken to them about your project prior to beginning this on-line application process. We recommend this to ensure your project can meet the requirements of the program and that you have the necessary information to complete your application.

You will need to attach your Eligibility tool to your application. This tool allows you to monitor your project's balance of Australian spend, points and Australian financial contribution, and whether they meet the necessary minimum contribution.

Please note that:

- The approval of an official co-production does not guarantee financing from Screen Australia. A separate application should be made to Screen Australia in line with its existing funding guidelines and procedures.
- Screen Australia reserves the right to provide details of a project's co-production arrangements to government organisations which require this information in order to consider an application for finance.

Screen Australia aims to assess Final Co-Production Applications within twelve weeks of receipt of a complete application. However, it is important to remember that Screen Australia will consult with the other Authority during the assessment process and that Co-Production approval can only be granted once each Authority has approved the project. You should ensure your co-producer is lodging a complete application to its Authority at the same time. Delays with your co-producer's final application assessment will cause delays with Screen Australia's assessment.

Please tick to confirm that you have: *

- Read Screen Australia's International Co-production Program Guidelines
- Read the relevant Arrangement/s
- Completed the eligibility tool
- Talked to POCU about the project

Please provide your Co-Production Provisional Approval reference number *

Have there been any changes that have occurred to the project since the approval of the provisional application? If there have been changes, you will need to supply a statement of changes in the Supporting Documents section. *

Creative contributions

* indicates a required field

Screen Australia assesses the creative contribution of the Australian co-producer in two ways:

1. Australian creative points – measuring the proportion of Australian nationals in key roles through a points test, and
2. Australian spend – measuring the proportion of expenditure on Australians and Australian service providers relative to the entire budget.

The Arrangements require that each co-producer contribute a minimum percentage of finance and creative elements to the project and additionally, that these percentages be reasonably in proportion.

Screen Australia allows some leeway in meeting this requirement: the proportion of expenditure on Australian creative contributions (field E below) can be up to 5 per cent less than the financial contribution of the Australian co-producer (field B on the previous page). This means, for example, that if the Australian financial contribution is 60 per cent, the Australian creative contributions must be at least 55 per cent of the total budget.

Creative Points Test

You should be aware that:

Co-Productions: Final Approval Application

Form Preview

- producers do not attract points because there must be, by definition, one producer from each of the co-producing countries;
- an individual cannot be treated as two nationalities in one application;
- full points are given on the basis that the person involved is the only person undertaking that role and is present in that role for the entire project (in accordance with the requirements of that role);
- splitting of points may be approved on a case-by-case basis but only in circumstances where each person is sharing the role equally (for example, where each co-producing country has one writer each engaged on a television series), or, where you can show a percentage has been determined based on the number of directors or writers over a series;
- re-voicing or narrating in the language of each co-production country will result in the points being split, ie for an animation, voice cast is allocated 3 points, so if one voice track is undertaken in Australia and one track in the co-producing country, then the project scores 1.5 in the points test;
- for feature films and television drama, if the film is a majority Australian co-production (ie Australian financial contribution is greater than 50 per cent), at least one of the four lead roles must be filled by an Australian national or permanent resident (ie there must be at least one point for key cast).

If you wish to include the 'other point', you must demonstrate that the role in question is particularly important for the project and is a senior key creative role. For example, if your project is a martial arts feature, it may be possible for you to allocate a point to the fight choreographer; or for a musical, to the musical director or choreographer. If you do claim an 'other point' - please attach a brief statement justifying its use.

Australian Spend

Australian spend refers to the proportion of the budget which is spent on Australians and Australian service providers. It will not necessarily equal the Qualifying Australian Production Expenditure (QAPE) amount as understood in the context of the Producer Offset.
